

Dear Ash,

We all took breathe of relief when we first heard from you that you were safe. And, likewise when the terrible happening finally got over and we realized that most on the campus were safe. At the same time our heart goes out to the professor and the killer who killed himself. We pray for them and their family members.

Such terrible happenings we hear often lately. When it happens close to home, it hits hard as it invariably leads us into a scenario that that could happen to anyone and what if that anyone be from our family. That is traumatic to say the least until safety news arrives. When your safety news arrived today, our anxieties subsided. Your timely updates were helpful all along.

We thanked Almighty.

Some thank 'that whoever' that orchestrates every happening. Those who believe in Theory of Karma, they attribute it to the past and present karmas one performed. Some call it luck, destiny or simply just a 'coincident or a chance '. Take your pick and be thankful that you are safe because it wasn't your deliberate move not to be there at the happening place at the time.

Hope this would not distract you and other students from preparing for the upcoming exams. We wish for your best of preparation. You would, we know. We are confident.

Love,
