

Dear Dad and Mom,

I haven't talked to you in ages, or so it seems. You would think I don't care, or you are forgotten. That's not so, though. In fact, there is hardly a day goes by without thinking of you. Now that I am raising my kids, not only you show up on my mental screen every day I couldn't but admire what all you sacrificed for the mischievous kid that I was when home growing up. Remember those three nights in a row I came home late? You stayed awake until I came home and slept only after I slept. Now I realize the reasons for the concern. Every time I think of it, my eyes get teary. My heart goes out to you, Mom and Dad.

I wish there could be a magical way you could automatically hear my 'thank you' uttered umpteen times in a day. In its absence, I want to convey my every day thanks all together, on the Thanksgiving Day.

Thank You, Mom and Dad.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving Day and enjoy the (peaceful😊) Thanksgiving Day. Hope we all can be together next year at Thanksgiving Day at my house. Jason, Jill, and Janet convey Happy Thanksgiving to you as well.

Love you,
Your Debbie.
